

Friday 17 September 2010

P Brisbane PARK(ing) DAY

PARK(ing) Day is a global event that was started in San Francisco by arts collective Rebar. It's based on the idea that paying a parking meter is like 'renting' a public space, and instead of parking a car, why not park something else?

PARKs are surprising, fun additions to the everyday street environments, and powerful symbols of communities wanting to improve urban quality.

PARK(ing) Day is all about:

- Calling attention to the importance of urban public spaces
- Rethinking the way we use our streets
- Creating diverse conversations about design and how we make sustainable cities

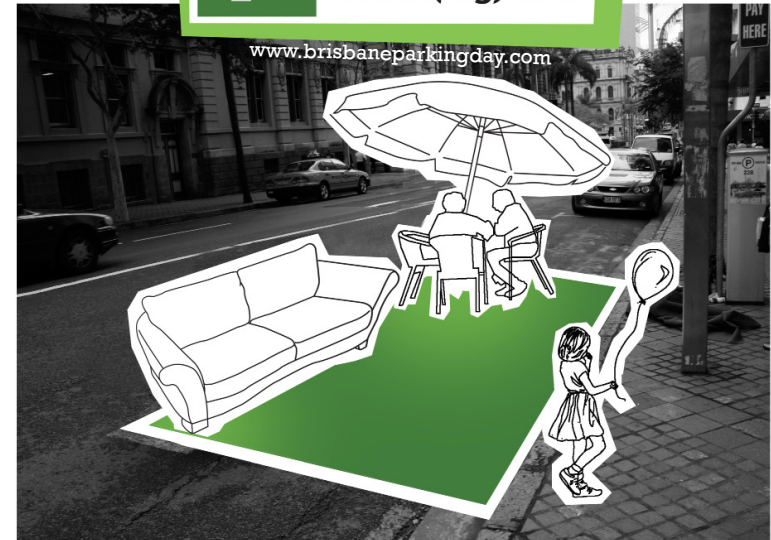

Register on our webiste
PARK! on the day
Share by emailing us

www.brisbaneparkingday.com
Email us at - brisparkingday@live.com

Original concept by Rebar - www.parkingday.org

Friday 17 September 2010

P Brisbane PARK(ing) DAY

PARK(ing) Day is a global event that was started in San Francisco by arts collective Rebar. It's based on the idea that paying a parking meter is like 'renting' a public space, and instead of parking a car, why not park something else?

PARKs are surprising, fun additions to the everyday street environments, and powerful symbols of communities wanting to improve urban quality.

PARK(ing) Day is all about:

- Calling attention to the importance of urban public spaces
- Rethinking the way we use our streets
- Creating diverse conversations about design and how we make sustainable cities

Register on our webiste
PARK! on the day
Share by emailing us

www.brisbaneparkingday.com
Email us at - brisparkingday@live.com

Original concept by Rebar - www.parkingday.org